Bob is a project manager with experience in application development and deployments as well as engineering design analysis. As Managing Consultant in Global Business Services with IBM for the past fourteen years, he is responsible for IT system implementations and cognitive solution development. Directly prior to this engagement, he spent one year on assignment in South Africa as part of the Emerging Markets Development Advisers Program (EMDAP). In that role, he was an advisor to South Africa's Department of Public Enterprises for activities in financial modeling and IT systems design. At both CD-adapco and AVL, Bob was a software sales engineer.

In his volunteer time, Bob does his part to enrich public education. For the past five years, he has lead a team of IBM employees who ementor middle school students at Deer Park Schools. He also spends his free time training for half marathons.

OneSource Experience

As a new consultant, Bob looks forward to putting his skills to work to help nonprofits improve.
