With a background in mapping and computer technology, Tai was involved with Nigeria's National Space Research and Development Agency for more than 10 years. Most recently, he was the managing director of GeoAppsPlus, a commercial division of that agency. Supervising a staff of twenty-five individuals, he presided over the technical, business intelligence, marketing, and human resource departments. Earlier in his career, he was the deputy director of software engineering with the agency. Tai led software development projects for Lucent Technologies and was senior technical staffer/manager with AT& T. He is a former adjunct professor at the University of Cincinnati, where he taught computer science. Tai's skill sets include project management, internet technology, geographic information systems, and corporate training. Now retired, Tai obtained a license as a health and life insurance agent.

Tai is active in Cincinnati's chapter of Black Data Processing Associates.

OneSource Experience
As a new volunteer, Tai looks forward to being part of strategic planning projects and assisting with leadership development training.
