Entrepreneurial strategist is the best way to describe Joy. For many years, she was a senior marketing executive with Xerox Corporation. Recognizing that businesses needed a solution to high volume document retention, she left the company to become co-owner and co-founder of Business Information Storage. During mid-career, she decided to study law and later became a well-known public defender in Clermont County. Although now retired, Joy maintains her Ohio law license.

Joy's successful defense strategies led her to the attention of former Governor Ted Strickland. He appointed her to serve on the board of the Southwest Ohio Developmental Center for two consecutive terms. Joy's love of tennis propelled her to become active as a volunteer with the tennis world. She is the President and incoming Chair of the Board of the USTA/Midwest Section headquartered in Indianapolis. She also serves on the board of USTA/Midwest Tennis & Education Foundation.
