Joe's expertise lies in information technology organization, strategic planning, and administration. While at Union Central Life Insurance, he co-developed and managed its information technology strategy, which led to replacing an external, nationally well-known data processing company with Union Central resources. Joe also was acting CIO for one year and worked strategically with business units of the company in utilizing technology to achieve objectives. Joe retired from Union Central as Vice President -- Information Technology in 2006 after a merger was completed. He was retained as a consultant for one year to assist in the transition. In 2012, he became a senior consultant with the Ross Group where he worked on two major organizational projects.

OneSource Experience

As project leader assigned to Know Theater, Joe assisted the organization with setting up a computerized inventory system. He also was project leader assigned to Findlay Market and Ohio Valley Residential Services. Joe advised the Boy Scouts on technology issues as the organization prepared to move into its new headquarters on Reading Road. He was a technology consultant to Cincinnati Public Schools and assisted in a board development project for Boys Hope Girls Hope. Joe frequently assists as a stakeholder interviewer for strategic planning projects. He pioneered OneSource's method for conducting grants research.
