Ralph has more than fifty years' experience in all aspects of leadership, management, product management, quality improvement, and technology management in multiple business sectors. He has managed the development of commercial software products and applications, from mobile to high-end software systems. Currently, an adjunct professor at the University of Cincinnati, he instructs on management and innovation. Previously, he was the Director of Data Systems at Children's Hospital, where he focused on quality improvement. An aspiring writer, his most recent book, Innovation and Entrepreneurship: A Competency Framework, which he coauthored, was published in 2015.

Ralph believes strongly in the importance of community involvement. He serves on the Board of 4 Paws for Ability and on the Implementation Committee for Wasson Way. He is on the faculty of the Osher Life Long Learning Institute and on the Legislative Action Committee of an environmental organization. He has assisted with fundraising efforts for Children's Hospital and the Leukemia Society. In his spare time, he is a runner and has been awarded medals in Senior Olympics competitions.

OneSource Experience

As a new volunteer, Ralph looks forward to working on business improvement projects, facilitating leadership training workshops, and coaching.
