Lynn is an IT specialist with more than 25 years' experience in project management, training, marketing, business writing, and all phases of the software development life cycle. She currently works part-time as a Talent Development Facilitator at Ohio National Financial Services. Having worked for many years in the for-profit sector, Lynn first was introduced to the nonprofit world when she joined Xavier University. While managing training and online learning, she became passionate about the importance of nonprofits in community life. She subsequently became an Education & Training Manager at Ingage Partners, where she designed an 8-week training program on emotional intelligence for all employees.

While at Ingage, Lynn was assigned to teach several classes at Per Scholas. Per Scholas is a non-profit organization that provides tuition-free technical training to unemployed and underemployed adults in the CityLink Center in the West End. Lynn volunteers at the Ronald McDonald House and with the Hydrocephalus Association.

OneSource Experience
