Catherine is a connector and a staunch advocate for businesses, of all types, sizes, and at all stages. She is the Past President & CEO of Chambers of Commerce in Georgia, New York, Maine, and the state of Tennessee. She also is the Past Executive Director of the Freeport Merchants Association. Catherine also worked for a toll chemical manufacturing company as their EVP for Global Affairs. When she moved to Cincinnati in 2016, Catherine became Executive Director/COO of the Cincinnati Bar Association. Most recently, she was the NKU Small Business Development Center Director. Catherine's skills include business development, business start-up and scaling, marketing/messaging, fundraising, leadership development and mentoring, workforce, and policy development. She has been recognized for her marketing, communications, and resource development efforts by the national Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives.

Catherine is passionate about her involvement in community life. She currently serves as volunteer staff with the USO of Central and Southwestern Ohio. She has also been part of NKU's Pension Committee, ensuring staff needs are met as NKU transitions to a new pension management system, and she served on the Clermont Chamber of Commerce's Work Readiness Initiative. Building upon her experience leading trade organizations, Catherine co-founded five nonprofits with missions ranging from eradication of poverty to workforce development.

OneSource Experience

Catherine looks forward to assisting with leadership development, strategic planning, and business improvement projects.
