Brian is a strategic management specialist with expertise in strategic planning, mergers and acquisitions, finance and accounting, and personnel. He spent 39 years with Procter & Gamble, most recently as Finance Director. He was an essential part of the team that integrated Richardson Vicks into the company. He also led the successful acquisition and integration of Iams. Originally from Scotland, Procter & Gamble dispatched him to live and work on multiple continents.

OneSource Center Experience

Brian has been the project leader, consultant, and coach on numerous projects. He was instrumental in working with two organizations on developing a merger plan. Other consulting assignments include providing strategic planning assistance to the Cincinnati Youth Collaborative, Greater Loveland Historical Society Museum, the philanthropic lab of People's Liberty, and working on a change management project for Lakota Schools. Currently he is the project leader assigned to United Methodist Church Food Ministries. He also has been an EXCEL coach for several years. Brian has expertise in many problem-solving techniques and is particularly adept at customizing each project to meet the unique needs of the client.
