James Mathews is a Finance and Information Technology professional, who offers over 20 years of experience in applied finance, data analysis, project management and system solutions. A strategist, he transforms plans into workable process improvements and raw data into actionable information.

James currently is a Senior Application Engineer with General Electric. In that role, he partners with GE Finance Global Process Leaders and HQ Controllershship on the design and testing of various integrations from corporate applications to Oracle Electronic Business Suite (EBS). Prior to his current role, James was a senior manager of process improvement, a site controller, and an audit manager for GE. James also has worked for FedEx as a senior performance analyst and a project manager.

Outside of work, James volunteers as a classroom teacher for Junior Achievement. He also operates a nonprofit organization, Community Catalyst, which provides financial support services to other small nonprofit agencies.

OneSource Experience

As a OneSource volunteer, James looks forward to working on leadership development, business solutions, and strategic planning projects.
