Michael is an accomplished executive leader with over 25 years of experience charting operations across nonprofit, educational, and media-based organizations. Most recently, Michael was the Executive Director of the Scripps National Spelling Bee, the longest-running American academic competition. In that role, Michael led the development of a strategic plan for refining the Bee's brand and increasing the scalability and sustainability of an organization that engages 11+ million school-age children, 25,000 schools, and 250 partner organizations.

Prior to Scripps, Michael spent over a decade as the President & CEO of the Simon Youth Foundation, which is dedicated to creating community economic support through high school drop-out prevention programs and post-secondary scholarships. He led that organization from infancy to a fully operational foundation and increased operational revenue by 45% and expanded programmatic services by 30%.

Michael also has served in senior leadership roles with GLAAD and Roosevelt University.

Michael is a fellow with The American Council on Education and is active with Cincinnati Music Theater.

OneSource Experience

As a new volunteer, Michael looks forward to being part of board development and strategic planning projects and assisting with leadership development training.
