After graduating with a Bachelor of Science degree in Food Science from Ohio State University, Jess has spent the last eight years working in Product Development. She currently works at Kroger as a Dairy Food Scientist, and she manages the development cycle of innovative consumer private label dairy products using a product lifecycle process. Most recently, Jess has been focused on innovating new ice cream flavors. She also is the Technical Training Subject Matter Expert for her department and is responsible for creating and presenting new pieces of training that fall within the department role development matrix. Additionally, she co-leads Kroger's Young Professionals Associate Resource Group. She previously served as the Our Promise Team Leader for Kroger.

Outside of work, Jess is pursuing a Master's Degree in Organization Development from Bowling Green State University

OneSource Experience

As a new volunteer, Jess looks forward to being part of strategic planning and business solutions projects and assisting with leadership development training.
