Jesse Bennett is experienced in using high-level persuasive skills and abilities to design and implement business plans. He is a strategic thinker capable of developing and managing multiple business functions from a broad-based perspective.

Jesse currently is a distributor and small business counselor for Ramah Services. In that role, he assists small business owners in cultivating and developing key accounts by providing training and distribution of professional products and services for the markets they serve. He also provides support in the establishment of start-ups and existing distribution and sales networks for the personal care industry. Prior to his current role, Jesse served as Area Regional Sales Manager for McBride Research Laboratories, where he recruited and developed new and existing market areas for sales and distribution of a national line of personal care products for the beauty industry.

An active community member, Jesse previously served as a board member for Neighborhood Health Care, and as a Multicultural Awareness Council Member with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. He also has been a Volunteer Counselor with SCORE, and a loaned executive to United Way. Additionally, Jesse is past president of the Project Blueprint Alumni Association Steering Committee.

OneSource Experience

As a OneSource volunteer, Jesse looks forward to working on strategic planning, business solutions, and leadership development projects, as well as coaching.
