Ayana Sloan is an attorney who reviews, analyzes, and codes large volumes of commercial agreements in order to provide national and multi-national clients with the data analytics necessary to exponentially expedite and improve the discovery process.

In her role as an attorney, Ayana analyzes contract clauses, obligations, risks and liabilities in hundreds of complex commercial and vendor agreements. She works to improve a client's risk management goals by combining technology with years of subject matter expertise.

Ayana also has worked as a strategic consultant to nonprofit organizations and small businesses, advising them regarding entity formation and governance, including assuring compliance with all matters relating to federal, state, and local regulations. She has negotiated and reviewed third-party contracts and agreements including lease agreements, vendor agreements, and equipment purchase agreements. She has facilitated the development of outcome-driven systems and processes for these organizations to identify and implement focused and effective strategies.

Experienced in the nonprofit sector, Ayana previously served as in-house counsel and COO for Christ Emmanuel Christian Fellowship, a multi-entity, community development organization. She also has served on the board of directors for Women Writing for a Change, the Cincinnati Empowerment Corporation, and Central District Forum for Arts & Ideas (Seattle, WA), as well as the advisory boards of University of Cincinnati Small Business Development Center and Young Urban Entrepreneurs. Ayana is a graduate of Leadership Tomorrow (Seattle, WA).

OneSource Experience

As a OneSource volunteer, Ayana looks forward to working on board development projects.
