Solving conflict through mediation, arbitration, and training has guided Elaine Dickhoner's professional life for the past twenty years. As the owner and senior mediator of The Conflict Management Group, she specializes in health care and eldercare. Earlier in her career, Elaine was heavily involved in nonprofit endeavors. At the Nonprofit Network (previously known as the National Grantsmanship Network), she led more than 300 workshops on nonprofit topics, including fund development, marketing, and volunteer management. During her tenure at the Franciscan Health System, she held progressively more important positions which culminated in being named Vice President and COO of the Franciscan System Foundation. Much earlier in her career, she was an educator and curriculum designer.

Throughout her career, Elaine has been heavily involved as a nonprofit volunteer. She combines her business and volunteer life by serving on the grant review panel of the National Association for Community Mediation. She is a long-term business classroom consultant for Junior Achievement. She also serves on one of the grant review panels for the Greater Cincinnati Foundation. Finally, she has been involved with multiple theater organizations as both board member and fundraiser.

OneSource Experience

Elaine's grantsmanship skills were put to work on a project for Hope Community Center. She also has been assigned to a business service project at Shomrei Olam.
